

OCIB 2023 IBOC

2023 Sponsorship Package

About Us

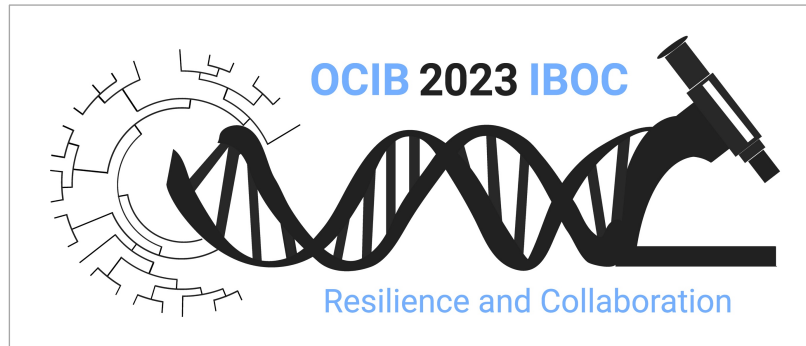

The Ottawa-Carleton Institute of Biology is an institutional collaboration between the Biology Departments at the University of Ottawa and Carleton University. The OCIB Symposium is an annual gathering that facilitates interdisciplinary research and collaboration between the two universities and external partners. The theme for this year's symposium is Resilience and Collaboration and will feature a spectrum of research topics.

Topics of Interest

OCIB members have significant expertise in fields including physiology, botany, biochemistry, neuroscience, molecular biology, genetics, bioinformatics, evolution, and toxicology, to name a few.

Important Dates

This year, the 20th Annual OCIB Symposium will be held on April 27-28, 2023, at Carleton University.

Why Sponsor?

With the generous support from industry and academic partners, it is possible for this symposium to remain accessible to all students. Student attendees at the conference benefit by gaining experience in the academic sphere, to include presenting their research, networking with students and professors, and gaining exposure for their research.

Your support enables us to maintain no conference fees, and is used to finance the following items:

- Poster boards for the Poster Session
- Accommodation of keynote speakers coming from out of town
- Refreshments throughout the conference
- Awards for student presenters

Your company will gain marketing exposure with future industry, government, and academic leaders through our promotional materials.
